ever to overcome the continuous cycle of warfare that has engulfed the Inner Sphere since the fall of the original Star League. This belief, almost religious in nature, has turned her into something of a patriotic idealist, even faced with the chaos of the falling darkness around her.

Although military service has not been highly regarded by many since the Blakist Jihad, DeBorah McDermott opted to enlist at the ripe age of 21, a full seven years before the collapse of interstellar communications and the chaos that has followed. A citizen of The Republic, born and raised, and a self-proclaimed student of history—particularly that of the 31st century—McDermott truly believes in the grand experiment that is The Republic of the Sphere. Noting the continuous warfare of the past four centuries, her ardent belief is that The Republic is the most perfect attempt Easily the heaviest Clan-made ground vehicle ever produced, the 100-ton Mars assault tank carries an arsenal powerful enough to cripple or destroy light BattleMechs in a single volley. Though comparatively slow as a result of its sheer mass, a thick hide of ferro-fibrous armor deflects enough enemy fire to give this hulking machine time to flatten the opposition.

The Mars designated GB2619-711F was originally a Ghost Bear vehicle, and was among the forces that Clan sent to help battle the Word of Blake during the Jihad, but its crew was killed during the fighting for New Earth by an enemy incendiary attack. Occasionally, McDermott claims that she can hear frantic, ghostly voices when operating this vehicle. Though her techs have examined it and certified everything to be in perfect working order, she continues to believe her tank is haunted, and has taken to calling it "Rolling Dutchman" as a result.
